Baseball Cap

I got a baseball cap about three years ago. I was visiting my uncle in Boston, and he bought it for me. It's my favorite piece of clothing. I wear it all the time.

My cap looks pretty much like most baseball caps. It's navy blue, and there's a B on front. The B stands for Boston Red Sox, my favorite team. It's sewn right into the cap with shiny red thread. There's a funny brim on the front of the cap. It's longer than most brims, and my brother says it makes me look like a duck! In the back, there's an adjustable strap. I keep the strap on the second hole. Then I tuck the leftover piece of strap inside a narrow slit.

My hat smells a little different, depending on the day. When it's just come out of the wash, it smells one way. After a couple days, it starts to smell another way. When a few weeks go by without washing it, it starts to smell kind of bad.

I love how my cap feels. It's wool, that means it's warm. Most other wool hats are itchy. Mine isn't itchy at all. There's a cotton band all around the inside. That makes it more comfortable. My cap is broken in. It's not stiff, like new hats can be. Sometimes I even forget I have it on. It looks funny when I take it off. It looks like my head's still inside!

This cap is important to me because it reminds me of my favorite uncle. Every time I wear it, I think of the good times we've had together. I love this cap!
