LINCOLN AND DOUGLASS: STRUGGLE BETWEEN FREEDOM AND SLAVERY

(Grade 11)

In conclusion, Lincoln and Douglass' speeches come from entirely different time periods and perspectives and communicate entirely distinct purposes. However, the speeches are similar because they both use powerful diction, tone, and argumentative methods to draw on their audience's emotions and religious fervor to call them to action. Lincoln and Douglass, both great American patriots, reached out to their audiences to eventually change the world.

HAMILTON VS. JEFFERSON: POLITICAL PHILOSOPHIES OF THE 1800S

(Grade 11)

Although both the Federalists and the Democratic Republicans did their best to lead Americans in a positive direction towards a bright future, it is evident that the Federalist Party was much more effective at accomplishing this goal. With their far-sighted yet prudent use of Federal power to control states issues and establish a strong banking system, the Federalists united the American people, resolved internal divisions within the country, and kept the best interests in mind for the future of the United States. The Federalists' relentless belief in protecting American freedoms, securities, and comforts allowed them to accommodate nearly every American and provide for the future of this great country.

T.J. AVERY/ROLL OF THUNDER HEAR MY CRY V. TOM ROBINSON/TO KILL A MOCKINGBIRD

(Grade 8)

I think the author, Mildred Taylor, put T.J. in the novel to show what happened when a black person got into trouble. She wanted to tell a little about the chain gang. I think the author, Harper Lee, put Tom in the novel to show how a black person could easily be made to look like they are something they're not. I think both authors wanted to show how a white man was always believed over a black man. They wanted to show how blacks were used and pushed around. I believe both authors achieved what they set out to do. I learned a lot about the lives of black people compared to the lives of white people during the 1930's.

EATING FRESH FOODS V. CANNED FOODS

Here are the main three differences between buying fresh foods and buying canned foods. As we can see it comes down to a personal choice, based on the time each person has, the money and the importance he/she gives to his/her nutrition and health. Therefore it is important that you consider your possibilities and choose the best type of foods for your convenience and lifestyle.

BACKPACKING V. STAYING IN HOTELS

The two possibilities discussed above are really good; everything depends on the economic possibilities of every person. Personally I recommend staying at hotels even if they do not have an excellent quality because the services you get in exchange for your money could be the difference between having a good trip or a perfect mess.

STICK SHIFT V. AUTOMATIC

Your personality will make you decide which is better. Cars are made for driving, and driving must be fun. While driving a car with an automatic transmission will be easier and comfortable, driving a car with a stick shift will make you a better driver with a better performance. Driving an automatic is just a part of driving that corresponds to leading the car. However, driving a stick shift will make the driver control the machine. Always remember to drive safely and buckle up!

THE SWIMMING POOL V. THE LAKE: AN EXPERT TELLS ALL

(Grade 5)

As you can see, swimming pools can provide a wonderful recreational experience for swimmers, and so can lakes, streams, and oceans. These settings differ in some features, yet they resemble each other in some ways. Take it from someone who loves to swim — it's hip to dip in both places!
