Literary Nonfiction— Excerpt from Into the Sea

After several more years, the turtle grows into one of the biggest creatures in the sea. Sharks, however, are still a danger. When one comes near her feeding area, she swims out into a warm current far away from the shallow ocean shelf. She crosses deep, deep water where sunlight cannot reach the bottom and seaweed cannot grow. There is not much to eat in the middle of the ocean, but she continues on her long journey, living on the extra fat in her body.
