

Walter went and lay down on the sofa. A gigantic gas bubble began to build inside him. “This is going to be trouble,” he said to himself, nervously. He was afraid of what might happen if he let it go. Walter thought maybe the house would explode. So he kept the gigantic gas bubble in. It wasn’t easy. In fact, it was torture.

Walter went and lay down on the sofa. A gigantic gas bubble began to build inside Walter. “The gigantic gas bubble is going to be trouble,” Walter said to Walter, nervously. Walter was afraid of what might happen if Walter let the gigantic gas bubble go. Walter thought maybe the house would explode. So Walter kept the gigantic gas bubble in. Keeping the gigantic gas bubble in wasn’t easy. In fact, keeping the gigantic gas bubble in was torture.

---

He went and lay down on the sofa. It began to build inside him. “This is going to be trouble,” he said to himself, nervously. He was afraid of what might happen if he let it go. He thought maybe the house would explode. So he kept it in. It wasn’t easy. In fact, it was torture.

Don't use the NOUN every time!

Walter went and lay down on the sofa. A gigantic gas bubble began to build inside Walter. “The gigantic gas bubble is going to be trouble,” Walter said to Walter, nervously. Walter was afraid of what might happen if Walter let the gigantic gas bubble go. Walter thought maybe the house would explode. So Walter kept the gigantic gas bubble in. Keeping the gigantic gas bubble in wasn't easy. In fact, keeping the gigantic gas bubble in was torture.

Don't use the PRONOUN
every time!

He went and lay down on the sofa. It began to build inside him. “This is going to be trouble,” he said to himself, nervously. He was afraid of what might happen if he let it go. He thought maybe the house would explode. So he kept it in. It wasn't easy. In fact, it was torture.

Walter went and lay down on the sofa. A gigantic gas bubble began to build inside him. “This is going to be trouble,” he said to himself, nervously. He was afraid of what might happen if he let it go. Walter thought maybe the house would explode. So he kept the gigantic gas bubble in. It wasn’t easy. In fact, it was torture.

When do you name the NOUN?

When do you
sub in the PRONOUN?

Walter heard a noise at the window. He watched it slowly open. A pair of burglars came through. They dropped silently in the kitchen.

“Watch out for the dog,” said one of the burglars.

“He won’t bite,” said the other.

Walter heard a noise at the window. Walter watched the window slowly open. A pair of burglars came through. A pair of burglars dropped silently in the kitchen.

“Watch out for the dog,” said one of the burglars.

“The dog won’t bite,” said the other burglar.

He heard a noise at it. He watched it slowly open. They came through. They dropped silently in the kitchen.

“Watch out for it,” said he.

“He won’t bite,” said he.

The burglars took everything they could.
Walter wanted to stop them but he was having unbearable gas pains...
“We’ve got it all,” said the second burglar.

The burglars took the lamp, the vase, the candle stick, and... and... and... Walter wanted to stop the burglars but Walter was having unbearable gas pains...

“The burglars have got the lamp, the vase, the candle stick, and.. and.. and...,” said the second burglar.

They took everything they could. He wanted to stop them but he was having unbearable gas pains...

“We’ve got it all,” said he.