

Put a question mark
at the end of a question.

Exclamation Mark

Put an exclamation mark at the end of an exclamation.

Quotation Marks

Quotation marks go around words that are said.

MARCH 17 • 4:00 P.M. EST

Advance Beyond Doing Reading to Teaching Reading

Many teachers find themselves doing reading with very little time spent teaching it. This is a subtle but significant distinction. Our class periods and reading blocks are often filled with students practicing, experiencing, and applying comprehension skills; they are “doing” a lot of reading. However, none of these instructional times include the explicit teaching of a new comprehension skill.

This 45-minute webinar will honor the various experiences packed into the typical reading block/ELA class period and show educators how to teach reading with whole-class comprehension lessons.

WEBINAR FEATURING:
KRISTINA SMEKENS
Educator, author, & literacy consultant

TAKEAWAYS:

- Acknowledge the purpose that various reading experiences serve within the reading block/ELA class period.
- Make time to teach whole-class comprehension skills within any content area.
- Identify the specific and explicit information that must be revealed when teaching any new comprehension skill.

Register for this FREE webinar at www.SmekensEducation.com